The DOE's decision to rush the license for Yucca Mountain and hold expedited hearings at a completely inadequate and remote facility is unconscionable. The responsible, though not politically expedient path would be to spend the money necessary on science and technology that would hopefully solve the deadly problem of high-level radioactive waste.

The public deserves to review all criteria and rationale for choosing Yucca Mountain, especially in light of seismic and volcanic activity and water intrusion. Our country should not force any state to comply with standards that have never been PROVEN to assure the safety of its citizens and their property.
